First let me say that from where I sit apparently some infractions were committed by MS with respect to fair trade practices. MS should be slapped down for that. Second if not for the aggressive practices of MS we would not now have the choices of programs from other software companies. They were spurned on by the might of MS and not put out of business. Competition is important on all endeavors of commerce. I feel that the courts have gone far enough with regards to the current case. The States must back off and look elsewhere for sources of income and not from MS. I have no stock or holdings in MS. Dan Kelliher PS...I do think the quicker this is properly resolved the sooner the economy will recover. You can almost say that our decline in the economy started when the federal and state brought suite!
